

Party People Present: Virtual Aura Paintings

Our artist will have printed blank cards that she can paint on quickly and create a physical painting for the client to keep, hang up, frame etc. Each of these paintings will be one of a kind as our artist will base the paintings off of the aura of the person being read and interpreted visually with colors. Auras can be many different sizes, shapes, and colors and gives the reader insight into the overall spiritual and emotional health of the client. Our artist has provided samples of possible paintings below which have been channeled using people in her life. The base black image can be changed, the possibilities are endless! Each of these paintings are approx 4.25"x5.5" in size. Larger sizes and base images are available for longer sessions.

Sample Images Below:

This image is a self channeled aura drawing. The red/orange aura color close to the body represents deep connections with base human needs and the necessity to express myself creatively at this time. The blue color represents the need for my voice to be heard and my coming into my own with vocalizing my needs. The shape of the aura is chaotic and lacks cohesion because of my present scattered energy. I would benefit greatly from focussing my energy into a creative pursuit that helps me use my voice.

This image is channeled from a peer of mine. This person's aura is mostly purple because they have a strong connection to intuition and their third eye. The pink color in the aura represents a strong base connection to the heart and humanitarian efforts. The blue represents the growing need for self expression and setting personal boundaries. The shape of this aura is slender and evaporating because she puts others above herself and lacks self care. This person would benefit from taking time for herself and focussing on her own needs first before she helps others.

This image is channeled from another peer of mine. The orange in this person's aura reads as a strong sense of self respect and individuality. The large and scattered and purple color seen in the aura represents anxiety regarding social situations and his perceived need to keep others at arms length. This person would benefit from being mindful of their avoidant personality and work towards putting trust into important others in his life while keeping good boundaries.
